FROM OUR REGION PRESIDENT

We all believe in the importance of Judaism. We believe in its wisdom, its spirituality, its meaning, its beauty, and its power to make people better and to make better people.

As Jews, we also love to argue. We argue with ourselves, with one another, and even with God. We all nod our heads in agreement when we hear the phrase, "Two Jews, three opinions." Jewish traditional learning places value upon provoking different opinions. The Talmud is full of such debates: different opinions are voiced, compared and tested.

As women engaged in our sisterhoods and in Women's League, we are often involved in complicated and sensitive issues. How we deal with these issues will almost always influence the results. Are we transparent and honest? Do we respect due process and something as simple as kindness and consideration? Do we care about the people who give their time, energy and heart to our sisterhoods? While attempting to attract new members, do we remember to honour the old ones? Do we celebrate happy moments, visit the sick, acknowledge sad times, and make people feel good about being involved?

We should strive to maximize the efforts of our volunteers to achieve what is best for our sisterhoods. We should work together to align and listen to the people around us with a vision and strategy for a common goal. I want to feel good about volunteering in my synagogue, my sisterhood and Women's League. We won't always agree on how things should be done, but we can agree to disagree with those that think differently from us and do that with courtesy and consideration. I believe we can work together in an atmosphere of civility and mutual respect. And although we may have different opinions, we should be willing to compromise in order to achieve what is best for our community.

FROM THE EDUCATION VP LOIS SILVERMAN

Passover is more than food.

It is a time to remember that we were once enslaved in both body and mind.

Thus it is a time to remember those who today are subjugated by political, economics, and/or cultural means.

Passover is the celebration of freedom.

Yet in every generation a pharaoh arises to challenge our way of life, our religion, and our freedom.

Thus every generation must fight for the continuation of freedom and then pass it on to the next generation.

L'dor v'dor.

This is one message of Passover.

Here is a song of the 1960's which could easily be a song we sing during our seders.

Happy Passover
Lois

Pass It On
Music by George Kleinsinger
Lyrics by Millard Lampell

Freedom doesn't come like a bird on the wing
Doesn't come like the summers rain
Freedom, freedom is a hard won thing
You got to work for it, fight for it,
Day and night for it
And every generation's got to win it again

Pass it on to your children, mother
Pass it on to your children, brother

You've got to work for it, fight for it
Day and night for it
Pass it on to your children
Pass it on.
And every generation's got to win it again.

A Meaningful Mother's Day Gift

Once again, Women's League has joined JWI (Jewish Women International) in honoring women and children in domestic violence shelters. Through the annual Flower Project, JWI sends bouquets of flowers to shelters across the United States.

Here is how it works:

- Make a $25 donation to JWI in honor of a special person.
- As a partner organization, Women's League receives a percentage of the donation.
- JWI sends a card, which will arrive by Mother's Day or Father's Day, stating that a contribution has been made in his or her honor.
- JWI uses proceeds to send flowers to more than 200 domestic violence shelters on Mother's Day.

We will be sending out more information soon.

The Bridge Ladies

A book review by Ruth Borsky, Region Book Chair

The Bridge Ladies by Betsy Lerner is definitely a memoir. It is the author's take on her mother's generation and her own Baby Boomers generation. It is also an attempt to "bridge" (pun intended) the gap between generations so that she can be closer to her mother as a daughter.

The "Bridge ladies," as Lerner calls her mother's group, are Roz, her mother, Bea, Bette, Jackie, and Rhoda. They are of the 50's generation where the "hair was frosted, nylons shimmery and patent leather pocketbooks carried every thing as they wore coordinated outfits." They are of the generation where you were expected to get married and have babies.

To be honest, these ladies cared about one another and each one's family, but they were not "gushers." They went through happy times (bar/bat mitzvot and children's weddings) as well as the deaths of children and husbands. As Betsy says, "Facebook may connect us across eternity, but it won't delivery a pot roast". The Bridge Ladies group was merely the vehicle that kept these friends constantly in touch and caring.

Betsy peppers her memoir with honest and personal tidbits about her travel towards independence and back again-marijuana, sex before marriage, life anywhere but New Haven and it's Jewish community, and sessions on the couch of a psychiatrist. She can't stop her metaphoric comparisons and descriptions. "Gefilte fish is a tan and grey mixture in the shape of a miniature meteor that has been promoted to delicacy status." In her acknowledgements, she thanked her husband "who read every single draft and never stopped pushing me [like her mother] to do better, offering advice that always turned out to be exactly right. And I wanted to kill him."

The Bridge Ladies is not a new book. It is available at the library, Amazon.com, and electronically. It is the latest recommendation of WLCJ's book group. It is an honest memoir with a happy ending, but it takes a while to get there.
